

Borghì S.p.A. of Castelfranco Emilia, Italy and Boucherie N.V. of Izegem, Belgium are proud to announce that they are joining forces to better serve the global brush industry and to jointly develop their technology to new heights. Both companies, very well-known as leaders in this industry, see this union as the perfect base for further excellence in the future.

Boucherie is one of the world's largest and leading companies in the production of brush manufacturing equipment. They are pioneers in the development of new technologies for manufacturing brushes and toothbrushes as well as cosmetic brushes, interdental brushes and other small sized specialty brushware. Boucherie's experience in precision, high-speed brush manufacturing equipment is second to none, as they are in especially high regard for their innovation. Boucherie is also recognized as a global technology leader in the development, design and construction of complex, single- and multicomponent injection moulds with several patents under their name.

Borghì is globally known for their innovative and quality brush manufacturing equipment made for the household broom and brush sector, the janitorial brush sector as well as the industrial and technical brush manufacturing segments of the brush industry. With a strong global presence via their many satellite facilities and agents, Borghi covers the world and especially the major brush industry markets with fast and efficient customer service, which is highly appreciated by their customers. Borghi also produces equipment for the production of strip and twisted in wire brushes, mops, as well as trimming, flagging and finished machinery and accessories.

More news will be provided in the coming days as Borghi and Boucherie bring forth further details of their collaboration.
